RMCHS seeks funding to explore a 2+2 general psychiatry residency to serve NW NM, with a focus on behavioral health for the region’s Native American population.

Region has a marked shortage of psychiatric providers, currently with only one psychiatrist and some telemedicine.

NM’s Native American populations suffer high rates of depression, suicide, substance use, and other mental health issues, owing, in part, to difficult social conditions and extensive intergenerational trauma.

Funding would allow RMCHCS to better understand the extent of the regional provider shortage, assess local training capacity, and formalize a partnership with an academic institution to allow for “2+2” training with inpatient psychiatric, neurology, geriatric psychiatry, and extended adolescent opportunities.

Final 2 years would take place in Gallup, with a focus on Native American mental health, substance use treatment and potential for research related to Native American behavioral health issues.

UNM has expressed partnership interest. Funding is requested to explore/formalize collaboration. Capacity assessment would identify needs, resources, and challenges; and, funding would support budgeting and program planning, initial faculty recruitment efforts, application timelines and curricular planning.

Funding would allow RMCHCS to build upon recent successes in creating a Family Medicine Residency Program (projected to enroll in 2021) and represents next step in RMCHCS’s efforts to improve access for rural and Native communities where primary care and behavioral health are critical areas of need.
Purpose and Goals

- Develop a rural General Psychiatry Residency Program that will train 2 residents per year, with a total of 8 residents in a 4-year program, including 2 years at a major academic institution and 2 years at RMCHCS.
- Increase regional availability of psychiatrists by training residents to serve NM’s rural and Native American patients.
- Improve mental and behavioral health outcomes.
- Recruit faculty dedicated to improving population mental health.
- Expand partnerships between academic medical centers and RMCHCS’s rural training site.
- Develop curricular best practices for training residents in Native American behavioral health.

Commitment to Serve Medicaid Patients

- RMCHS Medicaid Patient Mix: 38.8%
- Substance use Medicaid Patient Mix (WellSpring Recovery Center): 85%-95%

Efforts to Retain Residents

- Applicant describes clear intent to recruit residents interested in serving Native Americans in Gallup and the region.

Community Need and Responses

- NM’s Native American populations suffer high rates of depression, suicide, substance use, and other mental health issues, owing, in part, to difficult social conditions and extensive intergenerational trauma.

Organizations Chart and Bios

- RMCHS serve as the SI, and internal organizational chart clearly shows relationships for the intended program.
